BIXBY INCOME STAYS HERE.

COURT DECLINES TO INCREASE COUNT MANKOWSKI'S ALLOWANCE

Woman Who Owns Union League Club and Casino Theatre Has Been Insane for Many Years—Husband Dissatisfied With $25,000 a Year That He Handles.

Though he has a decision of the High Court of Justice of England in his favor, Count Casimir Ignace Mankowski is not to be allowed to take over to England the entire income of the estate of his wife, Grace Sterling Mankowski, who is a daughter of John M. Bixby. The Countess was declared incompetent five years ago and her titled husband was appointed committee of her estate.

Countess Mankowski inherited from her father and brother the entire Bixby estate, which was assessed for taxation purposes at $1,983,000 in 1904, when the two-thirds valuation rule was still in force. The estate owns the Casino Theatre, the Union League Club, 401 Fifth avenue and 233 West Twenty-eighth street. The net income from the estate considerably exceeds $100,000 a year. Out of this about $18,000 a year has been allowed to the Count as his wife's committee for her support and maintenance. He thought that it would be a good thing to get the whole $100,000 a year, but his sons, Casimir S. and Robert C. Mankowski, who live at 307 West Eighty-fourth street, and the trustees of the estate thought differently.

Count Mankowski was born in Austria, about sixty years ago, but his parents were of the Russian nobility. He went to England in the '60s and in 1873 became a naturalized subject of the queen. A few years later he came to this country and on February 25, 1879, he was married in St. Thomas's Church to Miss Bixby. The Count thought better of his English nationality, evidently, for in 1883 he was naturalized as a citizen of the United States. Since 1888 he and his wife have lived in England, and he is once more a British subject.

The Countess has been affected mentally ever since the birth of her second child, Robert, now 23 years old. Her ailment became worse gradually. By 1901 her condition had become so serious that her husband filed a petition in the Royal Courts of Justice in London to have her declared insane, and when this was granted after an investigation he was named as her committee. He subsequently had himself named here as ancillary receiver. Under the will of her father and brother the Countess receives the income of the Bixby estate, which is in the hands of George Freifeld as trustee.

Under the order of the courts naming him as committee, Mr. Freifeld has been allowing the Count about $18,000 for the Countess's maintenance and has also allowed him $3,000 a year for his own support and $1,500 a year for the support of each of the sons. Until recently the sons lived with their father at his home, the Maisonette, Parisfildroad, West Hempstead, London. But they came over here about the time that their mother left the sanitarium known as Featherstone Hall to live at the Maisonette. It is said that the relations between the sons and the Count are not entirely friendly.

Count Mankowski made urgent demands on the trustee, Freifeld, for more money for the Countess's support and also asked the English courts to direct that his personal allowance and the amount he is allowed for the sons be doubled. Failing in this he got an order of the High Court of Justice directing him to apply to the Supreme Court here for an order directing Mr. Freifeld to turn over to him the entire income of the estate. He made this application recently and it was denied.

The sons and the trustee joined in opposing the Count's application and urged that if the income were turned over to him it would be appreciably diminished by income and other taxes. They also declared that the estate would be much embarrassed by such an order, as the Count, being an officer of a foreign court, would not be easily amenable to the orders of the courts here, which control the estate itself. Any way, they could not see why the Count wanted $100,000 a year or more when he had managed to get along nicely on about $25,000 for the past four years.

SALE OF OLD CUSTOM HOUSE.

Secretary Shaw, in Reply to Suizer Resolution, Says No Deed Was Ever Executed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Secretary Shaw today made public his reply to the Suizer resolution relative to the New York Custom House property. It is as follows:

The Speaker, House of Representatives: Sir: Responding to the resolution of the House of Representatives, dated February 14, asking the date when the Government executed the deed for the Custom House property situated in Wall Street, New York city, to the National City Bank, where the said deed is at the present time, and in whose custody it has been ever since it was executed, and why the deed has never been recorded in the county of New York, and such other facts in connection with the sale of said Custom House property to the said National City Bank as may have come into my possession since the purchase of House document numbered 264, first session, Fifty-sixth Congress, I beg to say:

The document numbered 12, and especially the contract appearing on page 45 thereof, with copy of a deed prepared for execution, but that no deed had been executed at the time said document was prepared. I beg to further advise that no deed was executed, and none will be executed until the balance of the consideration is paid, which is not due and collectible by the Government in its position to surrender possession in the premises. No facts connected with the sale of the New York Custom House have come to the knowledge of the Treasury Department since the publication of the document referred to in the resolution. Respectfully yours, L. M. SHAW.

PHILIPPINES TARIFF BILL.

Senator Lodge Now Confident of a Majority in Favor of Reporting It.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Senator Lodge, chairman of the Philippines Committee, has been working patiently on the members of the committee, and it is believed he can now confidently claim a majority in favor of reporting the Philippines tariff bill. Two Democrats on the committee, Mr. McCreary of Kentucky and Mr. Carmack of Tennessee, have declared for the bill. Leading Democrats in the Senate have sought to bring the two Senators into line with their colleagues against the measure. An informal conference was held to-day at which Mr. McCreary was present, but he made it plain to his party colleagues that he would not be moved from his position. At present the committee stands as follows:

For the bill—Messrs. Lodge, Beveridge and Long, Republicans, and McCarmack and McCreary, Democrats.

Doubtful, but probably for the bill—Messrs. Dick and Nixon.

Against the bill—Messrs. Hale, Brandegee and Burrows, Republicans, and Culberson, DuBoise and Stone, Democrats.

DEFEND A MEAT DIET.

Speakers at Physical Education Society Differ From Prof. Chittenden of Yale.

"Do we eat too much meat?" was the question for discussion at the meeting of the Physical Education Society, in the Young Men's Christian Association, Twenty-third street and Seventh avenue, yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Francis G. Benedict, professor of chemistry in Wesleyan University, and also connected with the Department of Agriculture, said that where there was the highest protein there was found the highest energy. Where the food supply admits of choice, the people select a large amount of food rich in protein.

He spoke of the experiments of Prof. Chittenden of Yale. In these professional men who had lowered the amount of meat in their diet asserted that they felt much better, and the same was true of a number of soldiers. Athletes entering upon the experiment in excellent physical condition finished it with greater strength than before, according to Prof. Chittenden.

Yet these athletes all returned to their normal diet, so that, in spite of the apparent success of the test, Prof. Benedict said he was convinced that no radical change in the diet of athletes is necessary.

He said further that, contrary to common belief, the Japanese eat large quantities of the proteids, and that experiments by the Japanese government had shown that the meat eaters were stronger than those who stuck to vegetable diets.

Dr. George L. Meylan, physical director at Columbia University, also disagreed with the findings of Prof. Chittenden. He mentioned the case of a Yale athlete who showed great fatigue after doing his work on a diet small in protein and got back to his normal vigor as soon as the proteids were restored.

SAVED TWO HORSES EACH TRIP.

Mike Doyle Pushes His Way Into Burning Stable in Harlem Four Times.

Mike Doyle, a knockabout sort of character, was the means of saving a number of horses in a fire that gutted the one story frame stable of M. J. Kelly at 155th street and Broadway yesterday morning. As it was, three horses were lost in the flames, and three others were so badly burned that they had to be shot.

Doyle was passing the stable when he noticed a dullish red glare through the window pane. He made for the nearest fire box and sent in an alarm. Running back to the stable he burnt in the door and brought out two horses by the head. He repeated this performance four times before the smoke became too dense for him to enter.
